POLICE CHIEF Special Report On: Community-Police Relations August 2, 2023
Sponsored by Babbel

POLICECHIEFMAGAZINE / ARCHIVES / THE IACP / CAREERS / IACP LEARN / ADVERTISE WITH US

FEATURES

Building Community Trust through Language Justice
Ensuring sufficient communication and equitable service to community members across language barriers is understandably challenging; however, there are promising practices for agencies to emulate, including the Portland, Oregon, Police Bureau Language Justice Program.

The Snowball Effect
Police agencies must engage their stakeholders in activities that educate, empower, and build stronger relationships. Small actions will cause bigger actions and results, ultimately leading to noticeable change.

SPONSORED CONTENT
Build Trust and Improve Safety with Language Learning
It's essential for police officers to communicate effectively—both with their teams and the communities they work in. With Babbel for Business's language learning solution, police departments can keep officers safe, avoid miscommunication with the populations they serve, and build a safer environment for the public. Learn more.

Accountable and Inclusive Policing
One of the most important things the police can do to uphold their sacred obligation to community safety is to work deliberately to make everyone feel they are represented, that they are included, that they are valued, that they have a voice, and that they have agency.

Strategic Communications
Effectively communicating in a culturally relevant manner with various audiences is an essential component of community policing. To that end, a multidimensional, multicultural approach to strategic communications is imperative.
